

and when Sanchez have proven excellence in this format doesn't say need to be refracted through a franchise-league prism for the full spectrum of skills to become apparent. New Zealand's main challenge in recent days has been less their opponents, and more the context of a gruelling five matches in five days in the heat of the desert afternoon. In a distant echo of England's own progression to the knockouts in 19, they faced three must-win matches in a row to avoid against elimination, and while there was physical exhaustion to contend with, their minds stayed wavering in a series of countless wins against Scotland, Namibia and Afghanistan. The challenge about to be cranked up a notch.

But Kane Williamson's men know better than any global outfits about keeping their eyes on the prize. Who could be more driven for redemption than Martin Guptill, Mr "Barely There" Margins" himself? His erstwhile visage at Lord's is now etched into the sport's lore, but quite apart from the neatness of that particular narrative, here is a player whose form so far in the tournament - 176 runs at 35.20 and a strike rate of 131.34, with no score below 17 - implies that he's raced for a break-out. His long-levered approach allows him to gather momentum the longer he stays in situation. Moeen Ali arguably has a similar point to prove, given the tailing-off in form that led to his omission from the 2019 World Cup. But in Sharjah, he was a significant beneficiary of his misfortune, as he was promoted to No.3 with a license to pick up his free-flowing tempo, and he delivered with an agenda-setting 37 from 27. As a trophy-winner with Chennai Super Kings on these same pitches a month ago, he has the confidence and know-how to be the match-winner that England need. His powerplay offspin has been a revelation too... to England if not to his IPL peers, who you sense may
